SPAN 3317

Spanish Linguistics.

Three semester hours. (SP)

This course is designed to give students insight into how the Spanish language functions as a system and why it works that way. The focus of the course will be on practical application of linguistic principles to improve the student's ability to use and perceive Spanish as an integrated linguistic system. It will present an overall view of Spanish phonology, morphology, and syntax as organized systems, pointing to the students' relative correspondences and differences.

Prerequisite: SPAN 2320 and 2327.

Justification: The online version of this course is incorrect.
