This course deals with public policy as it affects older Americans. Topics include Social Security, age discrimination, elder interest group influence and activism, fraud and other criminal activity targeting older persons, and the role of the older people in public affairs.

Justification: we are no longer able to support this course and we have no one qualified to teach the course. We are not at all likely to add any new political science faculty for the time being. It is best to have the catalog reflect the courses we do actually teach. Moreover, this course is not a required course for any any existing major or minor.
