Delete this course: PSCI 4307 The Interamerican System Three semester hours.
This course analyzes the development of the modern Interamerican System, with emphasis on international and domestic factors that shape hemispheric pacts like the Organization of the American States (OAS) and sub-regional projects like NAFTA. The course also explores contemporary challenges to political and economic integration in the Americas.

Justification: we are no longer able to support this course because our current faculty are already stretched to the limit. This course has been taught only once in the last six (6) years. We are not at all likely to add any new political science faculty for the time being. It is best to have the catalog reflect the courses we do actually teach. Moreover, this course is not a required course for any any existing major or minor.
