Psyc 4311: Media and Behavior. It is the purpose of this class to examine the ways in which individual consumers, society and various forms of media interact. We will look at outcomes related to advertising effects, criminal behavior, sexuality and racial prejudice. Learning outcomes (as measured by objective tests) include

1.) Students will be able to appraise and evaluate historical patterns of societal reaction to media, including moral panic theory and the involvement of media in political and social change. This will be measured via objective testing.

2.) Students will be able to evaluate research regarding how various forms of media do and do not influence human behavior. This will be measured via objective testing.

3.) Students will be able to synthesize and evaluate emerging research on media effects from a “sociology of media effects” view. This will be measured via objective testing and participation in guided class discussions and other written assignments.

Cross-Listed with COMM 4311 and CRIJ 4324
SCH: 3
Prerequisite: Completion of ANTH 2346 OR COMM 1311 OR CRIJ 1301 OR PSYC 2301 OR SOCI 1311

Rationale: Course meets demand for electives in major and advanced general electives outside of major. Course is being pilot tested as “special issues” this semester and demand has been high (189 enrolled plus waitlist). Addresses issues important to contemporary society and fills a gap in the discipline.
Chair
College Curriculum Committee

Dean

04/2011