Description:

ENGL 3330 Literature in English.

Three semester hours.

This course concentrates on the literature of any era that is written in English but does not originate in the United States or its territories or in England itself. Areas of study may include literature of Commonwealth nations (e.g., Australia, Canada), of former British colonies (e.g., India, Ireland), and of English-speaking peoples in the Caribbean, Africa, and the Americas.

Prerequisite: Three hours sophomore literature or consent of instructor. May be repeated for credit once when the topic changes.

Learning Outcomes:

Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Explicate the literature's major themes, its texts, and its readers.
2. Articulate the major social, political, and cultural concerns of texts' places of origin.
3. Apply secondary sources in written works to articulate knowledge of the subject and to make strong connections between different primary texts.

Justification: This course enables students to learn about a variety of works from writers who publish in the English language but who originate in nations other than the United Kingdom or the United States. The course enables students, therefore, to have a wider access to post-colonial writers who write in English even though it is not their native country's language. Furthermore, it expands and diversifies the list of 3000-level English courses available to students.
