

Contributors

Stephen E. Costanza, Ph.D. is an assistant professor in the Department of Criminal Justice at Salem State College. He received his Ph.D. from Louisiana State University. He has published in the Journal of Crime and Justice and Criminal Justice Review. His research agenda involves crime mapping and quantitative methodology. He can be reached at scostanza@comcast.net

Mathieu Deflem, Ph.D, is an Associate Professor in the Department of Sociology at the University of South Carolina. Deflem is the author of Policing World Society (Oxford University Press, 2002) and editor of Terrorism and Counter-Terrorism: Criminological Perspectives (Elsevier, 2004) and Habermas, Modernity, and Law (Sage, 1996). His current research interests involve the policing of terrorism, international police cooperation, abortion policy, and theories in the sociology of law His home page has downloadable journal articles and presentations at: <http://www.cas.sc.edu/socy/faculty/deflem/default.html>

Pamela Irving Jackson, Ph.D, is Director of the Justice Studies Program and Professor of Sociology at Rhode Island College. Her research focuses on issues of social control and minority status, including comparative analysis of the integration of Muslims in western societies. She is the recent recipient of two Fulbright grants on this topic, and has worked with an international group of scholars at the Center for European Integration Studies at the University of Bonn, Germany. Her work has been published in several professional journals, including the American Sociological Review, Criminology and Justice Quarterly, as well as in her 1989 book, Minority Group Threat, Crime and Policing: Social Context and Social Control. She can be reached at: PJackson@ric.edu

John C. Kilburn Jr., Ph.D. is an associate professor of Sociology and Criminal Justice and Chair of the Department of Behavioral, Applied Sciences & Criminal Justice at Texas A & M International University. Recent articles have appeared in Research in Community Sociology, Social Forces, and Urban Affairs Review.

His recent research interests include issues of community security and reactions to crime. He can be reached at jckilburn@tamiu.edu

Roderick Parkes (UK) is research assistant at the Stiftung Wissenschaft und Politik in Berlin and a doctoral candidate. He focuses on the development of justice and home affairs integration in the EU, and specifically on questions of asylum and immigration. He received an M.Phil in European Studies from Cambridge University in 2002. Some of his work has been published in The Discourse of Sociological Thought. He can be reached at Roderick.parkes@swp-berlin.org

John Eagle Shutt, J.D., M.C.J., is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Sociology at the University of South Carolina, where he also serves as Visiting Instructor in the Department of Criminology & Criminal Justice. Mr. Shutt is a former prosecutor, public defender, and judicial law clerk. His work has appeared in Criminal Justice Studies, Criminal Justice Policy Review, the Journal of Crime and Justice, and the Journal of Drug Issues. His primary academic interests are in culture, natural selection, criminology, and law.

Claudia San Miguel, Ph.D, is an assistant professor of criminal justice at Texas A & M International University. She received her doctorate from Sam Houston State University in 2005. She is co-author of The Death Penalty: Constitutional Issues, Commentaries, and Case Briefs. Her research interests include human trafficking and smuggling, U.S.-Mexico border justice, and comparative police systems. She can be reached at csanmiguel@tamiu.edu.

Lynne Snowden, Ph.D, is an associate professor in the Department of Sociology and Criminal Justice at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington. She has published four books, including Collective Violence (2000) and Terrorism: Research, Readings, & Realities (2005), as well as numerous journal articles on violence, policing, and other related topics. She is currently working on a second edition of Collective Violence. She can be reached at snowdenl@uncw.edu

Reid C. Toth, Ph.D, is an assistant professor at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington. Dr. Toth came to Wilmington after three years as an assistant professor of criminal justice at the University of Nebraska at Kearney. She has published a book on the topic of school violence and has another one in progress on minorities in the criminal justice system. She has published research most recently in the International Review of Modern Sociology and Judicature. Her areas of interest include corrections, juvenile justice, school violence, and racial issues in criminal justice.

Judith Warner, Ph.D is an associate professor of sociology at Texas A & M International University who received her doctorate from the Department of Sociology, University of Arizona. Guest editor of this issue of JSEB on “Homeland Security and Immigration,” she will also guest edit an issue of JSEB on “Human-Animal Connections.” She has previously published research in the Journal of Family Violence and Psychological Reports as well as numerous published essays on immigration. She has been a member of the American Sociological Association Task Force on Assessing the Undergraduate Sociology Major and a co-author of Creating an Effective Sociology Assessment Plan (2005). She can be reached at jwarner@tamiu.edu.