Justification: Texas Geography is an important topic for our students. Most of them are native Texans. They will live and work in Texas. Knowledge of Texas geography increases the understanding of the people places and environment of our state. In this course, we cover topics that are pertinent to many educators, politicians, business owners as well as every day citizens.

Course: GEOG 3314: Texas Geography

Description: A geographical survey of the Lone Star State. This class will examine the environment, population, settlements, land uses, and cultural heritage of the State of Texas through the unifying concept of the region. Prerequisite: none

SLOs: Upon successful completion of this course, it is expected that each student will be able to:

- 1. Recognize the various sub-regions of the state of Texas and explain their uniqueness in terms of culture and environment.
- 2. Analyze the intersection of the environment, culture, history and society across the state of Texas.
- 3. Interpret cultural and natural landscapes to understand the processes that made them manifest in their forms today.
