HIST 4310

Historical Perspectives

Three semester hours. (FL)

This is the required capstone course for graduating history majors and minors to bring together many of the ideas and skills which they have learned during their coursework in history. The class will focus on an overview of historiography, the scholarship of historical writing. The course will emphasize the broader themes of world history and their impact on different eras and groups of people. Professional applied skills of historians such as research, presentation, and writing in multiple formats will be part of the course. May not be substituted for any other course without written permission from the department chair. Prerequisite: HIST 3303 and Senior standing.

Justification:

HIST 3303 Historical Methods is designed to provide history majors with the knowledge and skills to research, write, and analyze historical material effectively. HIST 4310 is the capstone course where majors apply this knowledge and these skills for the purposes of program assessment. Therefore, it is essential that students complete HIST 3303 before attempting HIST 4310. ✓
