

If I go to counseling does it mean that there is something wrong with me?

Of course not. For the most part, people who use our services are interested in their personal growth and adjustment to the world around them. Many students face normal developmental concerns and academic pressures, and at times, they may feel acute anxiety, sadness or depression.