

Dr. Marcus Ynalvez is the Interim Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and Professor of Sociology at Texas A&M International University (TAMIU). His research has been funded by the National Science Foundation, where he has also served on the Committee of Visitors and as a panel reviewer. His scholarly work centers on the sociology of science and advanced quantitative methodologies, with a particular interest in global scientific collaboration and research capacity-building in developing countries.

Dr. Ynalvez has led multiple study and research abroad programs, fostering cross-cultural academic exchange and experiential learning. He actively mentors both graduate and undergraduate students, guiding them through independent research projects and professional development. He has also served on review panels for the National Institutes of Health and has presented his work at international conferences across Asia, Europe, and North America.

A recipient of numerous teaching and research awards, Dr. Ynalvez is committed to advancing interdisciplinary scholarship and promoting inclusive excellence in higher education.

